WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 23, 1851.

These thoughts are suggested by a discourse, on the Destiny of the Black Race, delivered recently before the Kentucky Colonization Society, by the Rev. Dr. Robert Breckenridge. Of this address, which cannot be too widely circulated, we are glad to be able to place before our readers the following very striking passages:

"The largest, the most enduring, and in all respects the most remarkable example which history affords us of a race without a nationality, and therefore without what could be properly called a distinct civilization, is this black race. And surely the pupillage through which it has passed, has been without example bitter and protracted. How much has it not required to prepare it for this final destiny? Shall we therefore say, nothing awaits it? We cannot say this without contradicting all that is true in detail or profound in conception in the history of the past. Let us rather believe that an exalted destiny may be in the career to which it tends. Unto this are all the testimonies of the past—unto this are all the indications of the present. The principles which are at work throughout the earth can scarcely fail to produce it. The exigencies which control all human things present a combination which can hardly allow it to fail. Slowly—perhaps remotely, yet inevitably—there appear to await the black race a nationality, a civilization, and consequently a share in the affairs of this world, immeasurably different from any thing it has hitherto exhibited.

"To us has been reserved, again, an immense, perhaps a controlling portion of this great work. Our colonies in Africa occupy the central portion of that continent of the negro's fatherland—which, so to speak, faces inward to civilization. Behind them, stretching across the continent, are four thousand miles of fertile territory, inhabited, though not densely, in chief part by the black race, in the first stages of an opening civilization. North and south, for at least a thousand miles in each direction, is also a fertile country, inhabited mainly by the same race, in a condition similar to that already stated; a land four thousand miles broad from north to south—larger, by far, than the Roman Empire—the home of the black man and the grave of all besides—now peopled with more than a hundred millions of inhabitants. All things conspire to the same grand result. The State we have planted is precisely so situated as to receive from without, and to propagate within, the best influences which all other nations can exert. The immense race, and the vast continent behind this State and around it, are placed exactly in those circumstances most favorable to the exercise of all such influences from such a quarter. And the State itself has been created and will be indefinitely augmented from these materials, which, of all that exist, are the best fitted for this as well as for all the other great objects connected with African colonization. It is impossible to avoid the conviction that such causes must be followed by corresponding results. Already they have manifested themselves, and the native population which has voluntarily sought the protection of the colonists, and subjected themselves to the genial control of their laws, is represented to be about twenty times more numerous than the colonists themselves. We have sent out less than ten thousand colonists; but their laws and institutions are respected, and to a good degree obeyed by nearly two hundred thousand persons. Imagine a like result—but even in a much lower degree—produced by every ten thousand additional colonists sent out; or, if it be thought more rational, by every twenty-five years of effort. How manifest is it, that before we shall have removed the mass of our free black population, or before a single century shall have elapsed, a powerful nation will have been created, and the ultimate redemption of the black race in Africa placed on a footing as secure as that on which the prosperity of any existing State rests! Or, if any one thinks proper to do so, let him double, triple, quadruple the time, the toil, and the risk. In the creation of an empire—in the redemption of a race—in the regeneration of a continent—in the consummation of a work whose benefits all nations may reap, and from which no evil can arise to any human being, we can well afford to toil long, to risk much, and wait God's time. We are engaged in our sublime end; and, relying on our own strength, we point to the business track in which they who are to follow us should tread, and rejoice the more that they shall reap far more abundantly than we."

ARRIVAL OF THE CHEROKEE WITH THE CALIFORNIA MAIL.

The Cherokee, Capt. Windle, arrived at New York, on Sunday, bringing the California mails, 175 passengers, and $403,135 in specie. She left Chagres, on the 5th inst., and Kingston, Jamaica, on the 12th.

The English steamer Great Western was lying at Chagres when the Cherokee left, and was employed in taking on board over $100,000 in gold dust from California. The steamer had not arrived, but was hourly expected. Two hundred persons were awaiting her arrival.

Wm. H. Williams, of New York, died at sea on board the Cherokee on the 12th inst., and a Mr. Clemens on the 9th inst.

The Cincinnati Chronicle of Monday, 14th inst., says:—"On Friday last, while visiting at the residence of Larz Anderson, Esq., General Scott became suddenly ill, inasmuch that he could not return to his rooms at the Burnet House. Mr. Anderson and his family provided the General with comfortable quarters, and by their assistance and kind attention, and the medical assistance called in, he was able to recruit his strength in a great measure. Yesterday he was decidedly better, and hoped to be out again today, on the business of his Western tour." The General had so far recovered that he left Cincinnati on the 14th, on his route to St. Louis. On leaving, a company of Cincinnati volunteer artillery honored him with a salute of 50 guns. He intended making a short stay in Louisville.

From Texas.—By the Galveston we are favored with dates from the City of Galveston as late as the 5th inst.

The smallpox is disappearing from Cincinnati, on the Trinity, and from Houston.

There was a remarkable storm at Galveston on the 5th inst. Hail fell freely; and after the storm had subsided hail stones were picked up measuring, in some cases three inches in diameter, and weighing more than half a pound. Several thousand panes of glass were broken from windows facing north and west. The temperature of the atmosphere was at no time, before, during or after the storm, changed.

During the storm the Star Hotel was struck by lightning, and a youth living with Mr. Santer severely struck by it. The building was a good deal damaged, and the alarm of fire sounded; but all flame did not break out.

From Minor's Rock.—We understand that at low water, the wreck of the light-house on Minor's Rock, can be plainly seen. The massive iron work of the structure lays on the ledge to leeward, the lantern broken in two, and the keeper's house and other parts a mass of ruins. Mr. Bennett has made preparations to secure the lantern and other parts of the wreck, and hopes to find the bodies of his unfortunate assistants.

Thousands of strangers have flocked to Colonsset to witness the scene of the late disaster. We understand that Mr. Bennett was much annoyed by the intrusion of strangers into his cottage, yesterday, eager to secure pieces of the wreck as relics of the mournful catastrophe.

The steamer R. B. Forbes did not go down to Minor's Rock last night, in consequence of the severity of the weather, and the heavy sea. She will resume her station to-night.—Boston Journal.

The Mormons.—From the Desert News, published in the City of the Saints of the Great Salt Lake, of December 29th last, we learn that the General Assembly, had just, and received the Governor's message; continued its sittings four days, and then adjourned to the first Monday in January. That the titling office had been removed to the front room of the mint; the post office was in the old titling office, where the news would be delivered, and the time of labor on the public works reported.

Then follows a "proclamation to the saints" in which among other things it is announced by "revelation" that "inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together, to offer up your sacraments before Him. And behold, this should be wine, yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your make. And again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies. And again, tobacco is not for the belly; neither for the belly, and is not good for man; but is an herb for bruises and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill. And again, but drinks are not for the body, or belly."

These, and other "words of wisdom" are recommended to the Twelve, High Priests, Seventies, Elders, Bishops, Priests, Teachers, Deacons, Brethren and Sisters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and they are ordered to confer together and decide whether they are sent forth in the wisdom of Heaven or the folly of man."

Auld Chorus Song.

BY C. C. VAN ZANDT.

The wine is bright as the lips of Night,
When the day is past and done,
And glowing with bliss she snatches a kiss,
From the cheek of the setting sun;
He goes to his sleep on the rosy deep,
And layeth his armor aside;
Far up in the West he hangs his crest,
And his banner upon the tide;
The Northern Lights like Angel Spirits
Come dancing up the sky,
To cover his bed for overhead
With golden drapery,
And when each fold is all unrolled
Upon the moonlight bars,
They fasten them high in the azure sky,
With the points of a thousand stars.

Then drink at Night, when the wine is bright
As the blush of a living girl;
'Twill be thy soul in the crimson boat,
As the ocean covers a pearl.

Drink with a star the stars are out,
The silver moon is born,
And the Pleiades keep their dreamless sleep
Above her created horn.

A pillar of light in the hands of Night,
With the moonbeams running o'er,
He quells them off with a song and laugh,
And clings it as before.

The rivers run all one by one
To the mouth of the sleeping sea,
They flash and gleam a vast stream
In joyous revelry.

He drinks them all with a whoop and call,
And shakes his foamy brine,
And then with a roar, he treads the shore,
Like a giant refreshed with wine.

Then drink to-night, the wine is bright,
It flashes in the bowl,
For Spirits do swim the golden beam,
A singing to thy soul.

For woman's smile may charm awhile
Like the light of a trembling star
That seemeth to rest on the living breast,
When 'tis up in the heaven afar;

A loving clasp, a skyward grasp,
A passionate embrace,
And then we feel the rugged Real,
And meet it face to face.

Then for the wine—the ruby wine,
The blood of the purple grape,
A wispedated in time of need,
All hazard to escape.

No! drink awhile to woman's smile
And all the bliss that 's in it,
The silver flash of a caten's dash,
Over the rocks within it.

A REMARKABLE STORY.—The Presbyterian, a religious paper, published somewhere at the north tells the following extraordinary story:

A young man in the township of Warsaw, Genesee county, N. Y., was engaged in cutting wood; and in felling a tree it became entangled in the branches of other trees. While endeavoring to disentangle the tree and bring it to the ground, it suddenly fell, and splitting by the butt, he was caught by the foot and thus suspended with his head downward. In this condition he cried for help, until his voice was gone and his strength well nigh exhausted. His axe had fallen, and he could barely touch the end of the helve with his finger. He labored to reach it, but it was all in vain. Could he but get it he could extricate himself. But alas! it was beyond his reach. What was he to do? He had cried for help until he could no longer speak. He was in the woods, three quarters of a mile from any human being. The weather was extremely cold, and he was hanging with his head downward, suffering extreme pain, not only in the foot which was caught in the cleft of the tree, but also in the head, caused by his unnatural position and the great exertion he had put forth to be heard. Death now seemed inevitable, unless he could be immediately extricated. There was no alternative. Summoning all his courage, therefore, he came to the determination to make the attempt to cut off his leg; and should he succeed in doing this, there was but a faint hope that he would thereby save his life, for there was no surgeon at hand to take up the arteries—no kind friend near to bind up the mangled limb. It seemed more than probable, therefore, that he would bleed to death. But what will a man not do to save his life? He had in his pocket an old dull knife. With this he cut off the legs of his boot and stocking and then unjointed his own ankle.

This being done, he crawled to his dinner basket and binding up the stump with a napkin which had covered his dinner, he started upon hands and knees through the snow for home. When he arrived within a few rods of his house he was discovered by some friends, who hastened to his relief. His strength was now exhausted. Help had come and he fainted. He was borne to the house and resuscitated. Now comes the curious fact; and I will here say that the gentleman who related the facts to me was present and went to the surgeon. "Go," said the wounded man, "go immediately to the woods and cut out my foot, for it is suffering most excruciating pain." They did so, and brought the foot to the house. He then said it was cold, and washed it put in warm water. This request was also granted. It was not in the room in which the unfortunate man lay, yet as soon as the foot touched the water he cried out saying, "It burns me; the water is too hot!" Upon putting the hand into the water it was found even so. The water was then made cooler, and he was satisfied. I will also add that a surgeon was obtained from Batavia, a distance of fifteen or eighteen miles, and the limb again amputated; the man recovered and became a preacher of the gospel in the Baptist Church.

There is only one objection to people who mean well; and that is, that they can never spare time to carry out their reading.

BY TELEGRAPH.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, April 19.

Professor Page's electro magnetic locomotive was exhibited to day on the Washington Railroad, in the presence of a large concourse of spectators. The experiment was partially successful, a power equal to five horses being obtained, but the car ran very slowly. Its self-moving appearance on the track was unique, and created much wonderment.

NEW ORLEANS, April 19th, 1851.

We have accounts from Grand Gulf Town to the 16th, at which time half of the town was in ashes and the fire still raging. There being no engines or other means of stopping the flames, all hopes of saving the town had been abandoned.

Advices from Hayti received at this port confirm the shooting, by order of Souleuvre, of Jean Baptiste Franca, the Minister of Justice, and seven others, for conspiracy against the peace of Hayti and Saint Domingo.

WASHINGTON, April 20, 1851.

Despatches were yesterday received from Mr. McCurdy, U. S. Charge at Vienna, of the date of March 29th, stating that the Austrian Government had refused the application of the Sultan for permission to release Kossuth and the Hungarian patriots, his companions, from confinement. By a compact existing between Austria and Turkey, the latter power was charged with and accepted the surveillance of these unfortunate exiles, numbering several hundred; but finding the expense of their maintenance becoming burdensome, she applied to be released from the incumbency.

Permission was granted in reference to all except Kossuth and eight or ten others. This decision was communicated before intelligence reached Vienna respecting the recent action of our Government. An urgent appeal will be addressed to Austria on this subject.

The Arch-Duke, the brother of the Emperor, who is to command the Austrian navy, will visit the United States in the course of the year, to examine our public vessels and modes of naval construction, and, doubtless, make himself acquainted with the character of our institutions generally.

THE FORREST INJUNCTION.—The Supreme Court has dissolved the injunction granted against E. Forrest, at the suit of his wife so far as it restrained him from molesting her, because no act of molestation is shown, and no good ground exists for apprehending any. It is also dissolved so far as it restrains him from disposing of his property, because he has not abandoned her without adequate support, and there is no reason to apprehend that he will dispose of his property so as to avoid the jurisdiction of the court. It is retained however, so far as it restrains him from prosecuting his suit for divorce in Pennsylvania.

A young lady, whose name was Mayden, having married a gentleman called Mudd, gave rise to the following:

Let's wife, 'tis said, in days of old,
For one rebellious halt
Was turned, as we are plainly told,
Into a lump of salt.

The same propensity of change
Still runs in woman's blood;
For here we see a case as strange—
A Mayden turned to Mudd.
